

I'm not sure about this

user1

What do you think?

user1

I feel both parties can be hypocritical.

user2

Yeah I'm thinking the same thing

user1

Both sides seem to be passionate about their own stances and beliefs so they can be hypocritical

user1

Yep. They will use anything if it fits their narrative.

user2

Can you think of an example

user1

and that's the waaay the news goes

user2

no

user2

Well one thing I can think of is gun restrictions

user1

I know democrats that own guns and believe in gun rights.

user2

So I agree.

user2

Of course Republicans are very for guns. It is in the constitution. So they are very much hypocritical towards Democrats who want to be resitrcitions on guns

user1

Im a democrat and believe in gun rights

user1

I agree.

user2

But clearly something needs to be done about gun violence and mass shootings

user1

Maybe Repulicans are more hypocritical when it comes to gun laws actually

user1

I don't think Democrats want to completely get rid of guns but that's how Republicans see it

user1

Every household should be able to own a gun, it's their American right

user1

Right and not all republicans want lax gun laws

user2

But some people are very mentally disturbed and I'm not sure how to keep guns away from them.

Especially with the whole healthcare crisis thing

user1

But gun control is just one example. There's also of course a big difference of opinions from the left and right when it comes to healthcare and abortions

user1

Probably just stricter policy to purchase firearms

user2

Republicans are very hypocritical of Democrats support of universal healthcare and the right to choose an abortion

user1

And I guess Democrats are very hypocritical towards Republicans who want to make abortions legal

user1

But when it comes to healthcare, I think free healthcare for all really plays a part in gun restrictions

user1

People need to have access to quality mental health

user1

I can't think of an example

user2

Either party will support an issue that is contradictory to their belief of the issue.

user2

Like supporting abortion but not mental health care

user2

or supporting LGBTQ rights but not addressing the wage gap between genders

user2